

HOTEL JEFFERSON BOOKS REPORTED $12,000 SHORT

Auditor Charles Frank Not at Hotel Since Annual General Audit Was Begun in November.

MANAGER REFUSES TO MAKE STATEMENT

Claim Manager for Surety Company on Frank's Bond Has Suggested That Hotel Ask for Arrest.

It was learned today that an apparent shortage of $12,000 has been discovered in the accounts of Charles Frank, auditor of Hotel Jefferson, who has been missing from the hotel since the day after the annual general audit of hotel books was begun by a firm of public accountants in the middle of November.

Lyman T. Hay, manager of the hotel and president-treasurer of the Hotel Jefferson Co., refused to confirm or deny the finding of the shortage, but confirmation was obtained from another source at the hotel.

The National Surety Co., which furnished $5000 surety bond for Frank, has been asked to pay the amount of the bond and the suggestion was made at the hotel that this company should ask that Frank be taken into custody.

A spokesman for the surety company could not be reached this afternoon, but Mr. Johnson, manager of its claim department, was quoted as saying the company had no formal report of the Frank shortage, but that on hearing of the preliminary finding of the audit, he had advised the hotel to ask for Frank's arrest.

The annual audit of all books in the hotel is being made by the accounting firm of Haskins & Sells. It was stated at the hotel that Frank had worked there for about 20 years, or virtually the time the hotel has been in existence, and that he had seemed to live in a modest manner.

ALLEGED CUSTOMER LIST OF BOOTLEGGERS SEIZED

By the Associated Press. WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—The District Attorney's office today threatened to prosecute those whose names appear on a long list of customers seized yesterday in a raid on what the police describe as a powerful syndicate of bootleggers.

"Regardless of the social, political or official prominence of persons who are shown to be purchasers of liquor from the alleged syndicate," said Assistant District Attorney Fremont, "prosecution will follow, and the names will be placed before the grand jury."

About 1500 names appeared on the list seized in a downtown office building. A dozen arrests were made.

The "conspiracy" clause of the Volstead act makes purchasers of illicit liquor guilty along with those who make the sale.

Some months ago a similar list, taken in a raid, and including the names of a number of army and navy officers and officials of civil departments of the Federal Government, was published in a Washington newspaper. Some of those listed promptly denied having made purchases and the District Attorney's office apparently decided there was little possibility of proving a case against any of those named.

The 10 men and two women taken in yesterday's roundup are said to be the syndicate to have used an elaborate code name. The police believe that at least a part of the "syndicate's" stock came into the country through the convenience of foreign diplomats who enjoy immunity under the law. When an attempt was made to break into one storehouse, a member of the staff of a foreign legation protested, and police officials announced today that they had turned the facts over to the State Department.

Two Penniless Women Live in $27,500-a-Year New York Apartment

—International Newsreel Photo.

MADE the residuary heirs to an estate thought to have been worth $2,000,000, and occupying an apartment in a fashionable Paris avenue, New York, the two women, a mother and her daughter face the strange fate of probably finding themselves homeless and in fact, living in their 28 rooms without such of furniture in them. The women are Mrs. Arnes Ballantine Stamford, and her 18-year-old daughter, Rosalind, and their literally bare apartment is in the white marble palace at 520 Park Avenue. Mrs. Stamford and her daughter were taken to New York from California 15 years ago by Mrs. Ellen Ballantine Kendall Roberts, Mrs. Stamford's sister. Mrs. Roberts had been divorced from Lyman B. Kendall and it was to him she left the bulk of her estate in her will. The estate included the apartment house, which she believed to be worth $1,000,000, and was sold for little more than half that, and the shrinkage represents the residuary estate that Mrs. Stamford and her daughter had expected to receive. The photograph shows the apartment house where the Stamps are living, the dotted lines indicating their apartment. The insert is of Miss Rosalind Stamford.

MAN AND WOMAN HELD IN MATRIMONIAL TANGLE

Accused of Defrauding Reputed Wealthy Retired Farmer of Barry County, Missouri
By the Associated Press. SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Dec. 22.—Fred Johnson and Mrs. Treasie Boswell, 27 years old, are held for trial on charges of having made purchases and the District Attorney's office apparently decided there was little possibility of proving a case against any of those named.

The 10 men and two women taken in yesterday's roundup are said to be the syndicate to have used an elaborate code name. The police believe that at least a part of the "syndicate's" stock came into the country through the convenience of foreign diplomats who enjoy immunity under the law. When an attempt was made to break into one storehouse, a member of the staff of a foreign legation protested, and police officials announced today that they had turned the facts over to the State Department.

Brown agreed and married Mrs. Boswell. Mrs. Boswell was arrested when she returned to Cassville. They were married in McDonald County. Johnson was also arrested and both were later released on bond of $1000 each. Brown went to the Bank of Commerce, the Bank of Commerce was sued on an allegation that its refusal to handle the Broadway Bank's clearings caused the bank to close. The bank was closed on Nov. 6, 1915, which occasioned its closing. The suit against the Bank of Commerce was for $1,516,454, and was settled for about $1000 less than that amount. $15,500, plus attorney fees. The $100,000 capital stock of the bank was wiped out by the expenses of liquidation.

Former Revenue Agent Indicted. NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 22.—Henry M. Berliner, former Federal internal revenue agent here, but now attached to the office of the Bureau of Internal Revenue of this city has been indicted by the Federal grand jury on charges that he attempted to extort a bribe of $2000 from a local businessman in connection with the filing of his income tax liability for the period of 1922-1923.

DIVORCE AND ALIMONY FOR MRS. JEANETTE A. ELLIOTT

A divorce and alimony granted to Mrs. Jeanette A. Elliott from Charles E. Elliott, 729 Washington avenue, by Judge Wurdean at Clayton yesterday.

Elliott is vice president of Mack-Elliott Paper Co. The divorce and alimony were to be $150 a month after Jan. 1, 1924, and $100 a month after Jan. 1, 1925. Elliott agreed to provide a reasonable amount for the education of Jeanette, 14-year-old daughter of Jean Elliott by a previous marriage.

Elliott testified her husband had been cold and indifferent to her for the past three years; that he stayed away from home as often as four nights a week, never escorting her to places of amusement, and declared he did not love her. He said he ascertained they were married in June, 1918, and separated Nov. 21 last. They had no children.

Chippewa Bank, it was alleged, was making a periodical examination of the bank in Louis County, and was not entirely satisfied with the record of the transaction. It was said, and wrote to a friend connected with the examining department of the St. Louis Clearing House Association suggesting an investigation of the certificates.

Shortly thereafter, J. T. Clabaugh, examiner for the Clearing House, entered the Chippewa Bank to make what officials said was the periodical examination conducted by Clearing House examiners of banks which are members or associated with the Clearing House.

No Entry Found on Books

No entry of the two certificates of deposit was found on the bank's books. When Carr was confronted with the matter, he is said to have made an admission to Examiner Clabaugh, last Saturday, that it was irregular. He later admitted there were other irregularities all in the account of Levy. This was reported to President Evermann and then to the Board of Directors.

Bank officials had for Commissioner Millsbaugh. As has been related, Carr appeared before the director Wednesday night and admitted a shortage of approximately $24,000. No definite amount of this shortage was given. It was said, but Carr insisted that $24,000 was the total. He asserted the bank was solvent.

The following morning Carr told President Eyermann that the shortage would be greater, but was vague on details. He said he had consulted a friend, Thomas B. Harlan, a banker, who would furnish all the information. The conference was called in the office of Sam B. Jeffries, a director and counsel of the bank, but Harlan stated he did not have all the information. Matters revealed there, however, prompted a decision, on advice of counsel, to close the bank until the exact condition was determined.

Statement by Levy

Levy, who now is connected with the Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York, with offices in the Chemical Building, today stated that he knew nothing of any irregular handling of his account by Carr, until he read of it in newspapers. He said he had been acquainted with Carr for about seven years, but had no dealings with him other than as a depositor and customer of the bank.

He stated he had deposited cash for the certain amount paid to him by Carr. He first stated he knew nothing about the transaction with the Virginia bank, but later said it was "regular banking business."

Declining to explain it in detail, Any irregularities in the handling of his account with the Chippewa Bank, Levy said, "is up to the bank."

Cashier Carr Owned Nearly Third of Chippewa Bank Stock

The latest official public list of stockholders of the Chippewa Bank shows that Cashier Carr was the largest individual stockholder.

He had 68,000 shares, or about one-third of the market quotation at the time the bank was closed, at $128,000.

The list, filed in the office of the Assessor, gives the stockholdings complete under date of June 20, 1922.

It shows that the stock control of the bank was in the hands of Carr, Gottlieb Eyermann Jr., the president, and Sam B. Jeffries, attorney for the bank, and one of the directors, and with the estate of the late C. D. Corum, Jeffries law partner, of which Jeffries and Carr are executors, and relatives of Jeffries and Eyermann, held 1299 of the 2000 shares of stock.

President Eyermann had 315 shares in his own name, and his brother, George Eyermann, held 10. Jeffries held 10 shares. Mrs. Jeffries, 1 share, and Jeffries and Carr, as executors of the Corum estate, 187 shares. There were 10 shares held by Mrs. Corum and 10 held under the name of the Corum estate.

Directors of the bank held approximately 70 per cent of the capital stock.

Announces Has $1200 for Men at Joliet, Ill., $800 at Chester, Ill., and $1400 at Marion, Ind.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 22.—One reason the Egan gang is always kept recruited up to full strength, despite frequent assassinations of its members, became evident here Thursday night when "Dinty" Colbeck, political leader of that group of St. Louis gangsters, arrived with $900 in cash as Christmas presents for 30 inmates of the State penitentiary. Departing, he announced, according to prison employees, that he had $1200 for inmates at Joliet, Ill.; $800 for others at Chester, Ill., and $1400 for yet others at Marion, Ind. This makes a total of $4300.

The money left here was in 45 crisp, new $20 treasury certificates. Colbeck has the list of 30 beneficiaries written, each to receive $30. The Egan chieftain was chaplain by four or five others, at least one of them a former convict, doubtless to prevent any pay-off holdup against the gangsters.

"It tough birds from St. Louis don't come here as Eganites they go back there vowing allegiance to that clan," one prison official remarked yesterday, in commenting on the occurrence.

This is the first time the Eganites have come out in the open with their benefactions. For years, dating way back into the days when Constable "Bill" Egan was flourishing as the "czar of the Rats," a good round sum has arrived here each yuletide for a certain hand-picked group of convicts, mostly from St. Louis, with an occasional addition from the city. The management was handled secretly, however, not even the prison authorities knowing exactly who sent the money. It always came in a lump sum to one trusted convict, who made the distribution himself. That custom was continued after Constable Egan's death by some one else connected with the gang, several hundred dollars having always with an exalted sense of public duty and responsibility.

Charles F. Murphy, Leader of Tammany Hall: The death of Frank Cobb comes as a great shock. He was a great man and a great journalist. We have had those differences that politics always produces, but through none of them did I ever lose my deep respect for his character and his admiration for his ability. In losing him the city and the country have lost a great man.

William G. McAdoo, former Secretary of the Treasury: I am deeply grieved to learn of the death of Frank Irving Cobb. He was one of the few editorial writers of our day whose observations on passing events challenged the attention of a nation-wide circle of readers. He illuminated every subject on which he wrote with a clarity and conviction no less by his masterly logic than by the masterful style.

PAYOUT ROBBERS GET $1348 AND OVERLOOK $1845

Saloon Proprietor at 800 South Seventh and Machine Shop Office at 4356 Maffitt Held Up.

Payroll robbers obtained $1348 in two holdups in widely separated parts of St. Louis within a few minutes after noon today, and escaped. In their hurry to get away in one robbery they failed to find $1845.

William Langloch, proprietor of a saloon at 800 South Seventh street, was robbed of $455 in bills when he stepped from his automobile in the rear of the saloon. Three men, one masked and armed with a revolver, stopped him while two others searched him. The $455 was in a pocket of his trousers. A package containing $3645 was in his coat pocket.

Money to Cash Pay Checks.

The robbers obtained $455, but did not unbutton his coat. Apparently satisfied they had all the money he carried, the robbers ordered him to enter the saloon, and then drove away in his automobile. Langloch had just returned from a downtown bank with $2300, which he had obtained to cash checks of employees of the Terminal Railroad Association and the Columbia Terminal Co., working in the neighborhood. He told the police it was his custom to have about that amount of money on his person when paying checks.

Intelligent, Effective Publicity.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.
I WISH to say a word of appreciation of the campaign made by your paper in behalf of the political prisoners who have recently been released.

There was no publicity so intelligent and effective as yours and the work done, particularly by Mr. Ross, was a great aid to us.

Holes and Bumps in Streets.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.
WHY is it that the Laclede Gas Light Company and the City Water Company cannot dig through our surface streets, do their work beneath the surface and then resurface the streets and put them in the same condition in which they found them? All through the city streets and boulevards, there are these deep cavities in the surface, approximately 15 inches to 2 feet wide, and sometimes as deep as 6 inches. These holes are permitted to stay in the surface of the streets sometimes for weeks or months. As an automobile driver, I think it is a shame that such a condition is permitted to exist. Why is it that the Laclede Gas Light Company cannot furnish mechanics and street workers who can finish a job when they leave it? When the United Railways tear up part of the streets and replace it, it does not sink or fall down in a way that would make it look in places disagreeable. If the company can furnish our city with this type of work, the other companies should be forced to do likewise.

Also how much longer are city authorities going to permit overloaded trucks, traction engines and steam shovels to pull over our wood block and asphalt surface boulevards and streets? The city constantly has a crew of men working on our streets, patching them up. There is only one way that this can be remedied, and that is to make heavy loaded trucks, heavy engines and steam shovels pull over streets that are not surfaced with the materials above mentioned. A few years ago, the city had an ordinance which would not permit the moving of a traction engine over streets without a permit to do so, and then the city authorities designated the streets which the driver of these engines should move over, and if there is a law of this kind now in existence, why is it not enforced? It would save our streets and the expense of constantly repairing same.

FOR A SAFER AND BETTER ST.
LOUIS.

How About Tom Mooney?

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.
PERMIT me as one of your readers to thank you for the generous and active part you took in obtaining the release of all political prisoners. It certainly makes me feel fine to realize that it was the largest newspaper of your city that undertook and carried out this humane and great work.

May I, however, at this moment ask you: Why did you forget Tom Mooney? Was not he a victim of the same abuse and the same mind as was the man who were incarcerated in the Leavenworth penitentiary? Have you not seen the statements and affidavits filed as to Mooney's absolute innocence? Then, why in the name of humanity, let this man perish in jail?

LEWIS HOROWITZ.

Read as a Dictrator.

The letter of the 15th inst. by "35- year-old Democrat" sounds too much like a Jeffersonian thesis. At the present day we should never go farther back than the Monroe Doctrine, entangling alliances, isolation, etc.

We recall the time when we pullers got hold of ex-governor Ross and demanded him to make him believe he should run for President. We trust this is not the case of ex-governor Gardner, but then you never can tell. If any man would detect wiretapping it would be Senator Reed. We know he has been a very warm friend of the ex-governor and would not see him sacrificed as Folk was, if he could prevent it.

Of course, some of the Senator's enemies will look upon his timely return as that of a dictator, but remember right does not have to be a good thing to have a dictator? And who is better qualified for such a position than the Senator? We haven't had a war or the whisperings of one since his clarion voice sounded the alarm of having anything to do with Europe and His brooks.

The Senator knows a great mistake is being made by daring to present the name of the ex-governor as a candidate for the nomination. If he had been consulted and his advice taken, this gaudy blunder would not have been made. We need just such a man as the Senator to tell us Democrats what to do and how to do it and when.

SEPTUAGENARIAN DEMOCRAT.

MELLON SPEAKS AGAIN.

Secretary Mellon has again spoken on the bonus. He says the direct cost of the bill which President Harding vetoed will total $5,400,526,444. The average annual levy for the first four years of the measure is placed at $225,000,000.

This statement of the case was made by Mr. Mellon in a letter to Representative Andrew of Massachusetts. The latter questions its accuracy. He quotes the Government actuary as estimating the yearly cost for the first three years at $51,000,000, or less than a quarter of Mr. Mellon's proposed tax reduction. He contends, further, that, even with the bonus, the Mellon program of tax reduction can largely be carried out.

The difference between those estimates is so immense, that, obviously, one of the calculations is wrong. There should be no great difficulty in proving which is wrong. Expert accountants should be equal to the task. And if the bonus Congressmen are as sure of their position as their presumable spokesman, Mr. Andrew, appears to be, they ought to rejoice in the opportunity of calling in the experts.

Meantime, the people as a whole will be loath to believe that Mr. Mellon could be so egregiously mistaken as Mr. Andrew's comment implies. Mr. Mellon knows finance and he knows accounting. It was because of his specialized knowledge of those subjects that he was made Secretary of the Treasury.

There is one subject, though, concerning which Mr. Mellon is either profoundly ignorant or fundamentally indifferent. That subject is politics as practiced by time-serving politicians. Throughout the incumbency of his office Mr. Mellon has never considered partisan political strategy in his discussions with Congress of the nation's revenues and expenses. He has been governed exclusively by the facts as he understood them. His deportment in this respect has been a refreshing novelty to the public. It has made him the administration's outstanding figure.

The critics of Mr. Mellon, on the other hand, have not been governed by facts. They have been vague, emotional and, in some conspicuous instances, arrant demagogic. When they talk about substantial tax reduction and a bonus, too, either their honesty or capacity is open to question.

Moreover, the thoughtless, almost flippant manner in which some of our Congressmen and presidential aspirants endorse the bonus indicates that they do not realize the American people's desperate need for relief from the present crushing taxes. The burden cannot be borne indefinitely. The plain truth is that the deadliest menace to the United States today—to the popular welfare and our American institutions—is taxes. And the world's history, from Rome to Russia, has recorded no truth more solemnly and repeatedly than that taxes are the root cause of great social convulsions and political revolutions.

The way to test those Congressmen who advocate the financing of a bonus by "soaking the rich" is to ask them to make the bonus contingent on what can be collected by increasing the rates on large incomes.

BILLBOARDING THE LANDSCAPE.

A recent correspondent in "Letters From the People" dwelt upon the right of owners of property aboutting State highways or other public roads to permit the use of their land for the erection of billboards and advertising display. The authority to permit or deny signs on the public right of way in Missouri rests with the Highway Commission, whereas, under the Minnesota law, which our correspondent quoted, all advertising signs on the public right of way are prohibited.

Owners, it is true, have the right to permit the sign on private property of such signs as do not interfere with the police power of the State, as, for instance, signs obstructing the view at dangerous crossings. Such is the right of the sign poster under State law, but there is no higher law to control the abuse of that right on private property?

Sights on public rights of way are only a part of the sign problem. Rural highways may be made scienically hideous notwithstanding the legal control of public property. Thousands of city tourists, out to get a whiff of the country and to soothe their eyes with its natural graces may find the landscape boorishly cluttered with ugly billboards which bring the mind back to the petty occupations and squalid atmosphere of those parts of the city where sign posting is unrestricted.

Advertisers may take it for granted that any person pleased by rural scenery is displeased by the defacement of it with signs soliciting trade, and the obvious retaliation is to trade elsewhere. If good counsel in this matter is ignored the lovers of nature may be driven to organization and will have it in their power heavily to penalize infractions of good taste and public spirit.

There is none of the law's delay, no constitutional obstruction, in the workings of public sentiment.

FRANK IRVING COBB.

A great mind and heart passed away when Frank Irving Cobb, editor of the New York World, died.

Modest and unassuming, thoroughly democratic in principle and practice, he was a virile force in American journalism. Mr. Cobb was trained in the best school of journalism. He had a strong, analytical, well-informed mind. He exemplified the best traditions and ethics of the newspaper. He had courage. Under his supervision as associate editor during the life of the late Joseph Pulitzer, and as editor subsequently, and with his own vigorous contributions the editorial page of the New York World was a potent force for good in the city and State of New York and in the nation.

Although a Democrat in principle, he never hesitated to expose and attack error and wrong in his own party. He never hesitated to attack predatory interests, no matter how powerful they might be. He never hesitated to expose and rebuke the wrong-doing of leaders of either party. Under his direction the editorial page exemplified independence and public service.

Mr. Cobb himself was a vigorous writer, clear in thought, direct and forceful in expression. In the newspaper and in the few articles he wrote for other publications, he demonstrated his devotion to the fundamental principles of American institutions; to justice and liberty and the sound limitations of governmental power. He served his country well. He had a winning personality, and those who knew him loved him.

Journalism and the public service has suffered a heavy loss in his death, but the deep sense of loss is in the hearts of his friends.

MAKE CHRISTMAS FIREPROOF.

The appeal of Fire Chief Panzer to take every possible precaution against Christmas fires was emphasized the same day by the news that Herman Nollenberger, playing Santa Claus for school children at Los Angeles, had been fatally burned because his costume caught fire. The Fire Chief called special attention to the inflammable material used in the average Santa Claus costume, to the danger in using Christmas candles, flimsy material to decorate Christmas trees, toys using alcohol, kerosene or gasoline; cheap motion picture machines with inflammable films, and accumulations of rubbish in stockrooms and other places. If cotton is used in costumes or elsewhere for Christmas effect, it can be made fireproof by soaking in a strong solution of alum, which is cheap and can be obtained at any drug store. Asbestos wool, while a little more expensive than cotton, is absolutely fireproof and can be used over and over again.

And the Fire Chief's plea for a Christmas free from fires, in order that the firemen may enjoy their Christmas, should cause the public to be doubly watchful. Christmas fires bring danger and sadness to many victims just at the season when everyone looks for safety and a share in the general happiness.

It is the children's day and season. They often suffer from the carelessness of adults in the matter of fire prevention. For their sake and our own, let us make Christmas safe.

New York folks, it seems, look upon Senator Reed as a violent wet. Not always. When necessary Senator Reed can also roar as gently as a sucking dove.

NORWAY QUILTS PROHIBITION.

Norway's prohibition experiment, already abandoned in effect, will be legally laid to rest when the Storting meets in January. This forecast is based on the action of the Communistic Labor party in joining with the Conservative and Agrarians for repeal of the law.

In the meanwhile Norway's experience ought to be illuminating to the United States. Like us, Norway encountered a serious smuggling problem. She did not solve it by extension of the three-mile limit or by utilizing her navy in pursuit of rum runners. She solved it by modifying her prohibition law, in consequence of which the smuggler has practically been put out of business; there was no market for his dubious merchandise when the ban was taken off of wines.

Our own extremists, however, refuse to face the grim facts of prohibition. They are still determined to accomplish the impossible by force. They are demonstrating one hundred per cent obstinacy. Other nations are showing intelligence by yielding to public sentiment and proven conclusions.

MR. ANTWINE'S OPINION.

MY BELOVED it was necessary for some body to get Dr. John Roach Stratton upon a debating platform and gain a decision over him in the matter of the Bible being infallible; but the thing somehow impresses me as being too much like taking candy from a child," Mr. Antwine said.

"Dr. Stratton wants to take the Bible hook, bait and sinker as an inspired document, and therefore lends himself to precisely what happened in the debate with a Unitarian. He might have got off easier coming to grips with someone better fundamentalist and unitarianism, but it is usually extreme that meet and tear one another's hair out in most controversies afflicting this warlike sphere. We have mighty few blows struck either by or between people occupying middle ground upon any proposition.

"In the days when the authority of the church was very great a good many things were proclaimed as truth which probably were not. This makes difficulty now, when the church has lost much of its authority. It is hard to keep everybody on a reservation which has not so strong a fence around it as it formerly had, and people like bishops are having a mighty hard time chasing loose stock.

"I have not the least intention taking sides in the great matter now convulsing New York City and Texas. It is their quarrel, and we can avail ourselves of middle ground in more ways than one. However, I am not going to lay any wagers that the fundamentalists are going to win. They are trying to put over what only was made to seem true by an authority which they no longer have. Maybe there is something more honest than that, but I cannot imagine it.

"Still, it ought to be possible for someone to get between a fundamentalist and a Unitarian," Mr. Antwine said. "If not, peacemakers will have to come mighty thin in this dreadful matter."

Students of a Missouri college busted the bank by drawing their deposits just before Christmas, which shows whether or not the yuletide spirit is just as much of a moving force in our breasts as it used to be. We are sorry the bank in this case thought there had been a change.

Scene: A living room. Typical family scene, about a week before Christmas; husband and wife deciding on mailing list for Christmas cards, with two sets of cards, one more attractive than the other.

Characters: Husband, at desk, addressing cards. Wife, sitting near by, helping, but more interested in a game of Canfield. (Only One Scene.)

Husband: We won't send any to the Wests?

Wife: Why, certainly, dear; we always get one from them!

H: What's the address? (Reading address book.)

W: Who's address? I won four dollars that time.

H: The Wests' address, dear? 742?

W: That's not a seven, that's a three.

H: Well, it's a wonder you wouldn't write more plainly.

H: How about the Huntingtons?

W: No. Well, yes! Send them one of the other cards. She's sweet, but he's certainly a conceited ass.

H: Oh! damn!

W: Now, what's the matter?

H: I just addressed one to a dead man.

W: Well, it won't reach him.

H: One for Mr. Jones?

W: Who is Mr. Jones?

H: Well, he's not good looking; so I don't suppose you remember my introducing him to you.

W: No, I don't; but send him one of these, if you must. (Handing him a dirty card.)

H: Who is this Mrs. Gills?

W: Oh! Sure to send her one.

H: What address?

W: I have it in my desk. Wait till I finish this game.

H: Yes, and you will forget about it.

W: Now, here are the Smith-Smiths.

W: That damn four spot stuck me in this game.

H: I don't see any excuse for swearing at cards. Think of the hard work I'm doing without such language.

W: Well, send them off.

CHRISTMAS TREE VENTURE PROFITABLE, HORNSBY SAYS

Refused Cash Offer to Give Some of Trees to Poor, Cardinals' Second Baseman Says.

Rogers Hornsby, star second baseman for the Cardinals, today explained that he was not moved to give 1500 Christmas trees to the poor of St. Louis because they were a drug on the market. His Christmas tree venture, he says, has been eminently successful, netting him a substantial profit. He added that he had refused a number of cash offers in order to save 1500 trees to give to poor families.

Members of "Commission Row" complained that Hornsby burst into the market with seven carloads of trees, that he had forced the wholesale price from $3 to $1.25 a bundle, dispelling all hopes of profit for anybody.

Verdict Rules Gustav Riesmeyer Was Within Rights in Holding $40,000 Securities.

Gustav Riesmeyer, president of the International Bank of St. Louis, was within his rights in retaining securities aggregating $40,000 from the estate of his brother, Edward H. Riesmeyer, who ended his life last February, Probate Judge Hodgen decided yesterday.

The brother's will was against Mrs. Frances S. Riesmeyer, widow of Edward, who charged her brother-in-law with unlawfully withholding and concealing the securities.

Gustav Riesmeyer denied any illegality and said he was holding his brother's securities as collateral for the brother's loans from the International Bank and the Gustav Riesmeyer Mercantile Investment Co.

While the police were arresting 47 suspects last night there were numerous robberies and attempted robberies by persons who did not fall under suspicion.

One of the men arrested, a former park watchman, was identified by victims of two robberies.

William Linders, grocer, 1705 North Jefferson avenue, was carrying tin cans and other rubbish to the ashpit at 9 p. m. when he was confronted by two men with revolvers. They ordered him to stand still. He heaved the armload of rubbish at them and ran back into the store. They left.

Man, 73, Fols Robbed.

Fred Danner, 73 years old, makes and sells furniture polish and lives alone at 1538A Benton street. Two men went there at 3 p. m. and forced him into a back room and searched the place, but found no money. They tried to make him tell them where his money was, but he said he did not have any and stamped on the floor as a signal to all downstairs neighbor, Charles Carroll. Carroll came to Danner's door to see what the trouble was. The men ran down, backed Carroll with revolvers into his own rooms and escaped.

Two men entered the Piggy Wiggle store at 1447 Arlington avenue at 6 p. m. Clarence Johnson, 3317 Papin street, the manager, and Roy Miller, 3514A Evans avenue, were there. The newcomers pointed revolvers and marched the others to the rear. One tried to open the register but failed. Miller was then compelled to open it. The robbers took the $8.70 that it contained and left.

William T. Dinkins, 4548A Page boulevard, manager of the Kroger store at 1227 North Newstead avenue, was standing in front of the counter talking to a boy when a young man entered, waved his hand toward his overcoat pocket and ordered Dinkins to get him the cash. Dinkins recognized him as the fellow who held him up at Page and Taylor Tuesday night and took $87 from him. Once wasn't so bad, but he felt that the young man was working too fast. He played for time. "I've got to see your gun first," he said.

Couldn't Produce Revolver.

"I've got it all right," said the other, "you'd better get the cash." "You've got to show it to me."

The robber, having no weapon to show, departed.

The two men who entered Mrs. A. S. Clavers' dry goods store at 1459 California avenue looked at Christmas handkerchiefs and then ordered hands up. Mrs. Clavers' sister, Miss Ida Stein, screamed and Mrs. Clavers screamed. The men grabbed 11 silk nightgowns valued at $8.25 and ran out.

William Kuhnhen, just before closing his grocery at 2800 Missouri avenue, was talking with Herman Morris, 2819 Missouri avenue, when two men came in with revolvers and took $30 from Kuhnhen and $7 from Morris.

Dorothy Lapage, 14, of 1439 Webster avenue, was dragged into an alley near her home by a negro at noon. She screamed. Men ran to her assistance and the negro fled.

Safe Carried From Home.

Burglars who entered the home of Otto Kadiowsky, 4156 Locy street, while the family was away, couldn't open a safe, so they carried it away. There was $103 in it.

John Coonrod, 7330A Virginia avenue, was robbed of $4.60 by two highwaymen on Koenlaven, near Virginia avenue. A handbag containing $175 was snatched from Miss Margaret Lucas, 4832 Emerson avenue, on the University heights.

Olive Jewelry valued at $75 was taken from the home of Mrs. Isobel Thomson, 5307 Cabanne avenue. Jewelry valued at $180 and $12.75 cash was taken from the home of George Peer, 4126 Louisiana avenue. Louis Schreiber, a 16-year-old newsboy, was robbed of $4.60 near his home by a negro. Dominic Buino was robbed of $75. When he had run in the crowd at Union Station, the negro, valued at $50, was carried away in their coop from in front of the butcher shop of Edward Bauer, 2857 Winnebago street.

British Conservatives Win Seat. By Associated Press. LONDON, Dec. 12.—The Conservatives gained another seat in the House of Commons in a by-election in West Derbyshire, necessitated by the death of C. F. White, Liberal. The Marquis of Hartington, Conservative, received 12,419 votes to 12,968 for W. C. Mallinson, Liberal.

THINKS FORD WILL BE "EXPENSIVE BOOSTER"

Bryan's View of Auto Manufacturer's Indorsement of President Coolidge.

The first impression made by Mr. Ford's statement probably will be favorable to President Coolidge's candidacy, but the reaction is likely to prove a damaging blow to the President.

"Loses His Prominence."

"Mr. Ford has been talked of as the candidate of the masses, his support coming from both Democrats and Republicans who interpret his candidacy as a protest against the reactionary policies of most of the Republican leaders and some of the Democratic leaders. Mr. Ford, as the millionaire champion of the poor people of the country, would make an inspiring spectacle, but Mr. Ford and his supporters will join with the rest of the big business men in support of a reactionary candidate.

"He will not carry with him any of the plutocrats because they are already supporting Mr. Coolidge; the President's opposition to the excess profits tax made sure of their support; but Mr. Ford's assertion of the masses will create an irritation that will become more pronounced as the campaign progresses. The men who have difficulty in keeping their household expenditures within their incomes —the men, who as a rule buy Ford cars—will resent the abandonment of their cause by one of the richest men in the country whom they regarded—mistakenly, it now seems—as their friend.

Seen as "Expensive Booster."

"His use of the word 'safe' in describing President Coolidge will suggest a companion word, 'safe,' which usually accompanies the word 'safe' when used to describe public men and political policies. Those who talk of a 'safe' and 'sane' candidate reflect upon the intelligence as well as upon the good purposes of the masses. President Coolidge will find Mr. Ford the most expensive booster who has yet climbed into the band after the winter they spent; his action employing a deepening division between the rich and the poor.

Author, 79, Takes Trip by Harry Rosecrans (Printed by the Hoyer Press, the publishers of the William F. Buckley Miner Co. Inc.)

THIS IS A strikingly handsome and artistic book, entirely Louis made, which was issued this week for the Christmas trade. The letterpress consists of sections from that learned, acute and emotional column, "The Daily Journey," which Mr. Burke wrote during the last year for St. Louis Times. One of the chapters is received to various scenes and incidents to which Burke, a recent arrival in St. Louis, brought fresh and curious eyes. The book is arrestingly illustrated by Mrs. Hanna Hall Cowper, of Ampton, Mass., last summer home of his daughter, Freda Chard, Monteagle, Tenn., was the bride's mother. On their return from St. Louis Times, the author, who has yet climbed into the band after the winter they spent; his action employing a deepening division between the rich and the poor.

Some of the chapter subjects "Mines" and the "Courts."

BEAT is the name of D. Byrne in modern romance, may each year bring another by him in the prayer of those reared in "Meester Marco" and "The Wind Blows."

In the baker's dozen of stories which fill the 400-odd pages of his latest, he continues to pen, writing beautiful prose, the old-fashioned phrase. D. Byrne is a natural-born story teller. He has, moreover, a deep insight into human nature, a delicate sense of humor and a style. One of the haunting stories in the volume is "The Pageant at Thebes." All the anguish together to lay before the Angel of the Lord—who speaks with Irish accent!—their complaint against man. They accuse him unceasingly of drunkenness, robbing his dark-skinned brother of slaying God's creatures "sport." Only the horse and the angel's shoulder, and the horse's nose into his hand.

"CHANGELING AND OTHER STORIES," by D. Byrne.

COME HOME," by Stella C. Perry. (Stokes.)

WILMETTE," rarely been a romance of the Land Louisiana, she set a standard of excellence which, one could well say, it would not suffer if it stood alone. If it had come out in "Palmetto" had come after, might have been better for hot suspicion forces itself that it, written first and did not find way until "Palmetto" had made broad path for it. But that only a suspicion.

Partly, perhaps, because of expectancy, and the inevitable comparison with the earlier more pretentious story, "Come Home," which it would not suffer if it stood alone. If it had come out in "Palmetto" had come after, might have been better for hot suspicion forces itself that it, written first and did not find way until "Palmetto" had made broad path for it. But that only a suspicion.

This, like the other, is a romance of the Louisiana rice belt. Her name, the girl of this was Berenicia, but they called Flame, or, more descriptive, Flame of the Birds. As for Flame, she had that kind of face and temperament, and as for birds they were the agreeable in the swamps and the birds' song and the birds' song. The birds and her home were passions. She fought for them partially. And while she fought for them, she won a happy which had not before been fully hers except as she found fighting for birds and home.

There are the Louisiana characters, sometimes weak, but always lovable, that Mrs. Perry knows well and draws with such fidelity.

McGraw's Statement That He Wouldn't Trade Frisch for Hornsby Is Confirmed Absolutely by Mr. Rickey

Hornsby Is 30 Years Old and Has a Bad Leg

—M'GRAW

New York Manager Adds Three Years to Star's Age in Denying Reported Trade.

OFFERED $300,000 ONCE

However, That Was When Leading National League Batter Was a Young Man.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—New York sport writers seem to be convinced at last that Rogers Hornsby, champion hitter of the St. Louis Cardinals, is not for the Giants. After a delayed landing from the grounded Leviathan last night, our Mr. McGraw looked every man within his range of vision full between the eyes and solemnly announced he has completed no secret trade for Hornsby, that he has not made an offer for the Cardinal star in three years, and finally, that he needs no trade none.

"Of course, I will be glad to listen if the Cardinals care to make another proposition," said he. "Otherwise not. Their last proposal involved Frisch, and I said then as I say now that I wouldn't give Frisch for Hornsby even up. There are three players on my club that cannot be had. The other two are Young and Jackson."

Young and Jackson.
The constant drip of water will wash away the hardest stone. John's repetition of an old story appealed to the local interests for the first time and today the common impression is that McGraw, contrary to previous belief, has nothing up his sleeve but a fat elbow.

"I made an offer of $300,000 for Hornsby in 1920," McGraw said in dismissing the subject. "The Cardinals should have taken me then. I am not prepared to repeat it now."

Hornsby is 30 years old and has a bad leg. I would be gambling if I were to guess the players the Cardinals wanted for him."

"What about other trades then?" he was asked.

It appeared he had none in mind. Southworth might be passed along, he admitted, in an advantageous deal, but that at present he had every intention of playing the young man in center field. Hollister? A good ballplayer but a sick man, a risk. Maranville? A man still strong, but he made some remarks about the youth being a great threat, particularly strong, which lead him point blank into some pitchers. He had been offered Crouse and Boley of the Baltimore club, but wanted neither, even at reduced rates.

And there one is, as the fellow said.

The St. Louis Angle.

As a matter of fact, Hornsby just recently passed his twenty-seventh birthday, and is the youngest star of established reputation in the major leagues. His knee injury, the first he has had in his career, handicapped him for a time last season, but it has been completely cured, and Hornsby is regarded as the same great player today that he has been for several years.

Hornsby has been with the Cardinals nine years, but he came up when he was an 18-year-old boy, just out of high school. This may account for the false conclusion as to his age.

He may be an old man 30 years old, with a bad leg," but to St. Louisans who have seen him lead the National League for four years and lead the baseball world with 42 home runs in 1922, it sounds strangely like the old story of the fox and the grapes.

EXTENSIVE PROGRAM PLANNED FOR EPINARD IN U. S. NEXT YEAR

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Pierre Wertheimer, owner of Epinard, a French three-year-old race horse, sails today for France. While no definite agreement was reached between Wertheimer and American horsemen, the prospect for a series of races between the French champion and the best of the American horses next fall is bright.

Indication is that the Epinard will be sent to America, where he will be trained for his fall tests. Wertheimer and Maj. August Belmont discussed a proposed racing program for the Epinard of three years, the first at three-quarters of a mile, the second at a mile and the third at a mile and a quarter.

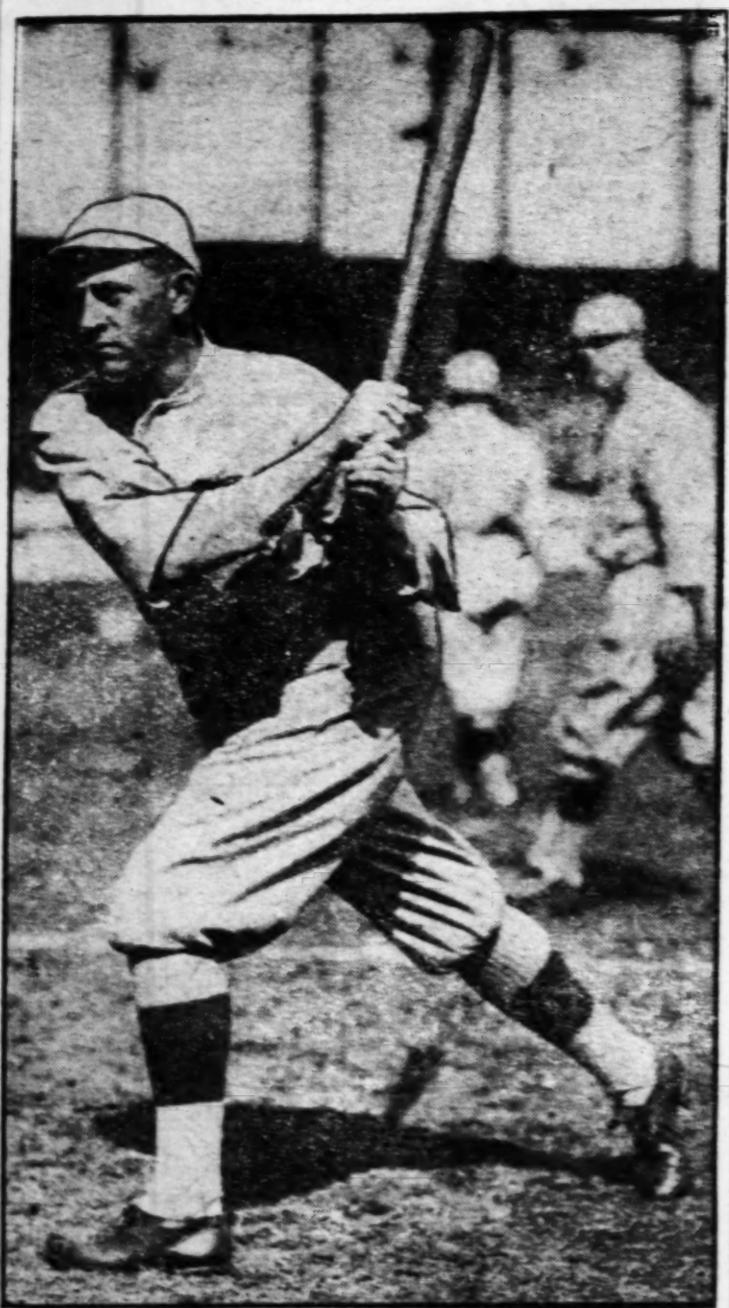

Epinard, under the plan, would run his first race in the horse sweepstakes at Belmont Park in the autumn, in which he would meet the pick of American sprinters.

The advisability of running one of the horses over the Kentucky Jockey Club circuit was discussed. The visiting sportman said such an arrangement would please him as he was unable to have his horses seen by as many sections of the country as possible.

Draws Unconditional Release

CLARENCE "TILLIE" WALKER.

Dundee Ignores Advice to Retire

Holder of Two Titles Still Hopes to Meet Champion Benny Leonard.

By Fair Play.

(Copyright, 1923.)
NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Johnny Dundee will not accept the freely given advice of the boxing critics and retire. Not this year, anyway. Johnny says that he has surprised the fans before and will again.

"Why," says James J. Johnson, his manager, "they had Johnny out of the ring, and he knocked out Willie Jackson. But did you notice that the opinion of the critics had any effect on Johnny? If so, you must have good eyes."

Out in the West Orange home the man who now holds two titles and has not relinquished his ambition to hold three did not seem to be in any difficulty for his title.

He sees no difficulty for him to get the third, and that Bernstein will get a chance before the winter is over to show that the decision by which he was deprived of his crown was as bad as folks say.

As for Benny Leonard, Johnny's chance of another crack at the champ is growing fainter and fainter. He had his opportunity last year, and he has now the same opportunity again. He sees no difficulty for him to get the third, and that Bernstein will get a chance before the winter is over to show that the decision by which he was deprived of his crown was as bad as folks say.

Lee Turned More Assists Than Any A. L. Shortstop

Boston Recruit Fielded Brilliantly for Tulsa Club in Past Season.

By John B. Foster,
(Copyright, 1923.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Dudley Lee, shortstop of the Tulsa Western League club, recently secured by the Boston Americans, is being hailed by baseball scouts as one of the coming stars of the big leagues.

"Lee is the best catch of the season," said one of the scouts, who tried for him and failed. "I baited my hook with yellowbacks, but Boston beat me to the catch. He was the best young ballplayer west of the Mississippi River last summer and the most promising young infielder in the country. Now watch some of these guys who did not get him start the anvil chorus. But I tell you he is a bird."

In the 1917 season that Lee played with Tulsa last season he made 210 hits and batted .240. And he had a way of cutting into the ball that impressed the scouts that he was real major league timber.

Pickling Brilliant.

But if Lee's batting was good it was poor as compared with his fielding. During the season he gathered a total of 1035 fielding chances and he accepted 1019 of them. He made only 43 errors in 101 games. The biggest thing he did was in association play and in that regard he showed a fine pair of hands and an arm that should carry him along in the majors.

Lee's assists were 567. Roger Peckinpaugh of Washington, who is one of the handiest men in either major league in getting his hands on the ball and starting things, had 519 assists in 1922 and that was the mark best in the American League. From Peck's figure for the season an idea can be had of the skill of this chap who played with Tulsa, but who has done for the Browns.

NEW BASKETBALL RULE
LIKELY TO HANDICAP
QUINTETS IN BIG TEN

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
URBANA, Ill., Dec. 22.—With the opening of the Big Ten basketball season two weeks off, the various squads will remain at school during the holidays and go through daily workouts in order to be in the best possible shape for the initial games and practice contests already played with minor teams. It seems that many of the fives can stand considerable improvement.

Football teams in the conference generally have easy going in their early games against nonconference teams, but this is not true in basketball.
Iowa, the leaders, Michigan, De Pauw and Washington University, while Wisconsin and De Pauw went into the after three overtime periods.
Several other conference quintets have had narrow escapes.

Illinois, expected to be a strong contender for conference honors because of the five regulars from last season, must be greatly to be in the race. Chicago,
Iowa and Wisconsin also can stand much improvement.

The new conference rule which requires that the man fouled make the attempt at the free throw is likely to cripple some of the teams this season. In the practice games already played only about half of the free throws have been made.

15,000 SCHOOLS AND

CHICAGO, Dec. 22.—Some nations have their revolutions, while America has its football, to give vent to the energies of young men. John L.
Griffith, commissioner of athletics for the Western Conference, concludes after a resume of the 1922 gridiron season.

His general football battles have become common in the country can be seen from the fact that at least 15,000 school and college teams were organized; over 100,000 games played, and 100,000 boys participated. Mai-
Gilligan, coach of the Harvard team,
"Who will say," he inquired, "that the football season of 1922 has not helped in making a more virile, courageous and sportsmanlike citizenship in the country."

Summarizing points of interest in the last season, the Western Conference commissioner said:

"First, there were very few fatalities compared to the past. The fact of the fact that the competition was intense, the sportsmanship for the most part was of a high order and there were fewer disputes and quer-ries than before. The coaching had improved and the effect was noticeable throughout the country. This may be attributed in part to the effect of the coaching schools which have been established in the large number of universities.

Fourth, the general plan of attack and defense was not materially different from the style of play a few years ago, but there was more integrity in the technique of playing. Fifth, there has been less criticism of the game this year than formerly. This is due to the fact that football has been accepted as a permanent and valuable addition to our educational institutions. Educators are quite generally agreed that football when properly conducted constitutes a school of good manners and morals."

The Fir and the Palm

A Continued Story

By PRINCESS BIBESCO

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTER.
Helen, with her husband, Cyril (Lord Horsham) has just arrived at the Horsham country home, one of England's famous seats of war. He had wanted her to throw herself into his arms, and instead she had walked up to her old neighbors. Helen has been asked to be the new neighbor of the Horshams. John Baldwin has been a friend of the Horshams. John Baldwin has a young son who is still in school. Their nephew, Toby Ross, lives with them.

INSTALMENT III.

"I LOVE YOU."

A pine tree stands alone on a bare bleak northern height; The ice and snow they smother it. As it sleeps there, all in white.

"Tis dreaming of a palm tree
In a far-off eastern land,
That mourns, alone and silent,
On a ledge of burning sand.

—H. HEINE.

HELEN explained that no one could really know what a treat it was for her to be there. After all, they had the luxury of seeing one another every day, and to her, alas! it was a comparatively rare pleasure. She noticed that the mayor had talked about hearts. She had always suspected that his experience of them was not purely medical (he was a doctor), but not all of us had his double advantage of charm to lead him astray and science to keep him straight. She thought she saw her old friend, the rector, looking shocked, but she would tell them a secret about the rector; he was never quite as shocked as he looked.

And so Helen rambled on with little intimate references to every one, which made every one happy, even an old forgotten anecdote about the matron's parrot leaping providentially to her memory. When she had finished the rector proposed a vote of thanks, which was seconded by the matron, and in acknowledging it Helen suggested a vote of thanks to the mayor, who in due course passed it on to Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin. And when every one had spoken once, and quite a number of people twice, a tour of the stalls was begun.

"On what system do you go?" murmured Toby to Helen. "I choose the thing the stall holder likes best. It is much simpler," she whispered, and then, with a radiant smile: "Worked by a sergeant major, did you say? Those tiny forget-me-nots! But how wonderful, and what a good idea to have a background of black satin! The flowers show so much more than they would on white."

At this moment the matron dashed forward with two painted wooden fans, representing the seasons (winter in a sailor hat and spring in a maid's cap).

"I'm sorry," she said, "are of special interest."

"Yes, indeed," murmured Helen a little faintly.

"They belonged to my grandmother-in-law, who was Lord Kitchener's mother's bridesmaid."

Helen felt Toby's malicious smile full on her. She accepted the challenge.

"I don't think," she said deliberately, "that you have the right to part with them."

Forward they went, from brown Holland anti-macassars covered with honeysuckle to brush-and-comb bags with "kind regards" in purple silk.

Mrs. Baldwin's stall had a night-gown case with a design of two butterflies on fuchsia. "Quite a change from the rose," she explained, and the rector's wife had embroidered a white satin altar cloth with gold crosses and madonna lilies.

Helen Makes Purchases

With tireless enthusiasm Helen admired and praised and bought and smiled till she was at last able to climb wearily over her purchases into her motor. "Buried under my treasures," she murmured to Mrs. Baldwin. "Thank you so much for the delightful afternoon. I have enjoyed every moment of it, and please all come and see me soon. Do!" she added, as she caught Toby's eye.

"Well, was Mrs. Baldwin so very kind 'really' and Mr. Baldwin 'such a nice, quiet man,' and the matron, a perfect saint, underneath her rather tiresome manner, and the Mayor, 'a perfectly delightful old chum,' and the base, the greatest success."

"They were sitting at dinner. You are spoiling all the fun I was going to have describing it."

"I was only guessing. True, I know the chains of the Mayor and the buttons of the matron, but I have never found his originality or her heart. As for the Baldwins, they are virgin soil for you to plant with the flowers of your imagination."

"The Mayor made such a good speech."

"What did he say?"

"That we all knew what happened to new friends; they become old friends."

"Dear me, how epigrammatic! Did the matron add her Madame de Stael to the Mayor's 'Talleyrand'?"

"Well, not exactly, that poor dear."

"And the Baldwins? Why, for once I am positively dragging information out of you."

"Mrs. Baldwin certainly is a little bright."

"And Mr. Baldwin?"

"Is rather gray, but I suspect full of point."

"Suspicious woman. Does this young child live alone with his silver nephew?"

"There is an overgrown, underdeveloped son at the awkward age and an enchantingly twinkling nephew."

"And are they delightfully rich?"

"I suppose so. The library was still full of little-pink begonias and Mrs. Baldwin wasn't wearing any pearls."

"How very restrained of her!"

"By the way, Netta was there."

HOUSEWORK MADE EASY

By Hannah Wing

A RECOGNIZED AUTHORITY ON MATTERS PERTAINING TO HOUSEHOLD MANAGEMENT.

THE day of the cast-iron kitchen sink is almost over, and the good-looking, easily cared for enamel and porcelain ones are fast taking its place.

Enamel sinks are comparatively inexpensive and durable if they are cleaned carefully and are not chipped. Porcelain, although more expensive, is more durable.

Drain boards to match the sink, or of some suitable wood like edge-grained cypress, hard maple, birch or beech, may be attached to the sink with a wall bracket. Cypress is less apt to warp or rot than the other three.

Only one drain board is used. It should be placed on the left side of the sink for the right-handed person. This is more convenient for washing dishes, since it avoids dropping of dish cloth or changing dishes from one hand to the other before placing them to drain.

The height of the sink will have much to do with the comfort of the worker. It should be set so that she does not have to bend her back or shoulders. Twenty-nine and one-half inches is considered a height sufficient for the average female. The sink should be raised one-half inch for every additional inch in the height of the worker.

Place the sink near a window if possible. Dark corners are not only dreary places to work, but frequently attract water bugs. It is also wise to keep the plumbing off the floor; a wall drain is better than one under the sink. A shelf under the drain board is frequently convenient.

Brushes used for washing dishes and cleaning vegetables, dish scouring mitts, soaps and cleaning agents should be kept as near the sink as possible. A small white enameled metal or wood cabinet over the sink will hold these supplies, while the brushes may be hung from hooks in the bottom so that they will dry quickly in a good circulation of air.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS.

LEARNING TO WALK.

So many thumps, so many bumps, so many falls each day; such rocks to pass, such tangled parts where little feet would stray. A thousand scares from falls down stairs and pitfalls such as these; marks black and blue always leave a wobbly little knee. Unfriendly doors and polished floors and chairs that slide and slip; inviting down to cross the room, what risks in every trip! What up and down, with baby frowns, what stumbling, rosy toes, what heaped-up woes when down he goes upon his precious nose! Let older folks stand by with jokes about his dismal state; though he may cry, they can't deny his grit is simply great. He scours to crawl and though he fall, he keeps his eye in view. In spite of knocks, in spite of the baby sees it through. And then at last, all trials past, he toddles down the street; he feels a bit, but what of it? He's on his own two feet! And so it goes: the baby grows and meets new tasks each day; from babyhood it's understood life isn't wholly play. Still jolly scout, he fights it out, and does the best he can, though to do these things must be all in one's wise plan. So many thumps, so many bumps, so many falls each day; he stumps his toes and bumps his nose quite often all the way. And yet his game! with steady aim he sees Earth's business through. Why should he balk? He learned to walk, there's nothing he can't do.

Household Hints

To preserve wire mattresses rub over with grease and then cover with sheets of thick brown paper. The only way of successfully removing the dust which collects between the wooden ends of wire mattresses is to blow it out. This may be done with bellows, or a bicycle pump answers the purpose very well.

When sewing snap fasteners to dress, the time can be saved if the snappers are sewed on one side of the goods, chalked and pressed against the other side.

Many a young man of the same place has gone off to sow his wild oats, But was welcomed back—a man among men.

But she—the woman—

Might not sow any wild oats.

For she forever reaps her harvest of woe.

When, O when will the Christmas spirit—Christian spirit Enter the heart of him that calls himself Christian

And let her who sows wild oats Be given a chance—an equal chance.

With man?

MUCH of the eye strain found among school children is not entirely caused by the use of poor eyes, but by the use of poor eyesight. Season. Color orthodontics with finely chopped parsley, a seed and third with hard-cooked eggs, and the third with the solid portion of chili sauce or a small piece of pimento if it is at hand.

Shape into eggs and place a green, yellow and pink egg in each nest, which is made of shredded lettuce leaves. Pass mayonnaise to serve with the eggs.

ALMOND CAKES

BLANCH and chop a pound of almonds, add a pound of sugar, with spice and grated lemon peel to flavor. Add the yolks of 15 eggs well beaten, sufficient sifted pastry flour to make a stiff batter, then fold in the stiffly beaten whites. Bake in small tins in a moderate oven.

THE WHOLE TRUTH

"Easy Come, Easy Go"

By RUTH LEIGH

(Copyright, 1923)

ICHIDED a young business woman I know on her extravagance. She is making $28 a week and has just ordered a fur coat to be paid for out of most of her savings.

She laughed. "Oh, I guess it's easy come, easy go."

She did not have to tell me that. I knew it. Unfortunately, it is the case with many young business women. A bank official once told me that he thought the average young woman in an office was the most extravagant person he knows, considering what she spends in relation to the amount she earns. I really believe he is right.

Are you one of those good-natured easy marks, prey to every peddler, solicitor and salesman who enters your office door? Do you let yourself be baited by a smooth-tongued solicitor only to find that the color runs on the next rainy day? Do you "fall" for all the solicitors of magazine subscriptions, club offers, who come to your door? Do you believe half these young men who claim to be "working their way through college" who try to make you pay $2 deposit on a subscription? If you do, you're the proverbial "easy mark."

The most serious part of the "easy come-easy go" philosophy of some young business women who do not entirely support themselves on what they earn, and who therefore have plenty of spending money, is the way they let them be sold spurious oil stocks, mining stocks, and what not. In an attempt at economy, believing that they are really investing, they let themselves be cheated of both savings and earnings.

Physicians say it is injurious to the eyes to study or read before breakfast, but not many mothers would come from over the left shoulder. If they use the table for preparing the written home work do not place a lamp in the middle of the table, unless it is one of the indirect type. Set it to the left side. There should never be a bright light in the eyes. If, for any reason, this is unavoidable, have the child wear a light shade over the eyes if he must write in the evening. Do not allow the child to read in a lying-down position nor slouched down in a comfey chair. Always insist upon an erect position in writing as well as studying.

A quaint and ancient wedding custom that still prevails in Huayang is the carrying of huge pretzels by Bretzen girls, who break up the delicacies into pieces which they distribute to the spectators.

NOTES

WOMEN

One of the first women to pass up upholstered butterfly stuff and will sit up ten paces in their favorite chair to have the same as any man. The husband has practically given up the love of stores and starting in on a business.

Statistics compiled by Miss Mabel M. M. show that the average height of women in the rear of the ladder is 5' 5 1/2".

Fanny Heldy, popular dramatic star, not only won the 1923 St. L. Derby, but is a licensed jockey and a social career in Italy for work in the United States.

The latest racing record破了记录的女性赛马选手是Anna Loos, 她在1923年赢得了10000美元的奖金。

Anna Loos, a 20-year-old woman, has won the 1923 St. L. Derby, the first woman to do so. She is the first woman to win the St. L. Derby.

As president of the United States League of Building and Loan Associations, Miss Anna E. Rae of Niagara Falls, N. Y., heads an organization that represents $2,500,000 of the nation's wealth.

Byrnes and Heldy, daughters of wealthy New York parents, are the first women to win the St. L. Derby.

The World's Best Saxophone

Baker's Cocoa is invigorating, stimulating only in the sense that pure food is stimulating, it has a delicious flavor and aroma, is a wonderful between-meal snack.

The Conn Company built the first American saxophone, regardless of other claims. And more Conn saxophones are sold than any other make in the world.

The greatest saxophone virtuoso and endorser is including such stars as Isham Jones, Paul Bland, Ted Lewis, Benne Weston and scores more.

Patented tuning device, simplified key system and many other exclusive Conn features make this not only the finest saxophone but the easiest to play. You can hear it in one hour! Cultivate your musical "bump".

NOTES A WOMEN

One of the first acts of a publisher, have passed up the United States Congress, a bill to ban buttery stuff and will pass a bill granting Mrs. Harding a time clock in their factory. Mrs. Harding, wife of the man who has been just the same as any man starting in on a business at the bottom of the ladder.

Statistics compiled at Vicksburg for a Japanese legate by Miss Mabel Newell, walk 19 paces in the rear of the economic department. The husband has practically the average height of girls of the same age of existence, the modern man has been increasing in height with his wife not adhering to it.

The Mothers of America will be honored by the Women's War Memorial in the erection, in Washington, of a monument 1000 feet high. It is a licensed jockey as nearly twice as high as the Washington Monument.

The latest fad among women in Paris is the pendants suspended in bags over the bosom.

Although radio engineers are in a new field, one woman has already made a name in the art. She is Miss Anna Loomis of Washington, and she is the only woman known to own and manage a successful radio engineering company.

Byrne and Helen, the daughters of Bernard M. McNamee, are wealthy New York physicians.

A WORD FOR THE GOAT.

A SCREW must be loose in our criminal laws, but you can't blame the jury for that.

They're teeming with loopholes and technical flaws.

But you can't blame the jury for that.

Convicting a guy is of little avail.

For he takes an appeal and he gets out on bail.

And it's seldom he sees the inside of a jail.

But you can't blame the jury for that.

The criminal works his political pull.

But you can't blame the jury for that.

He has no respect for detective or "bull."

But you can't blame the jury for that.

The criminal works his political pull.

But you can't blame the jury for that.

He has no respect for detective or "bull."

But you can't blame the jury for that.

He hires a mouthpiece, whose job is to see.

That his client gets bail and will shortly be free.

To go out and get the amount of the fee—

But you can't blame the jury for that.

VERY TRUE.

The skipper of many a baseball machine uses a left-handed nut to tighten up the defense.

EVERY DAY MOVIES

FAVORITE STORIES
By Irvin S. Cobb.

A SCENE AT THE OUTER PORTALS. THIRTY years ago a branch of the Farmers' Alliance was formed in the town where I lived. There were secret features about the organization—hailing signs and degree work and rituals and much general mystery. A husky young agriculturist from the lower corner of the county joined the order.

A few evenings after his initiation, he chanced to be in town.

All at once he remembered that this was lodge night. So he went to the Grange Hall, climbed two flights of stairs, paused before a certain door and, after the prescribed formula, rapped three times.

A slide opened in the paneled and a wary eye surveyed him.

"Well," said the unseen guardian of the outer fortress, "what do you want?"

"I now, I plow, I reap," said the visitor.

"The hell you do!" answered the doorkeeper, and slammed the slide back.

Very much nonplussed, the farmer clunked down the steps. On the street he met a fellow-member:

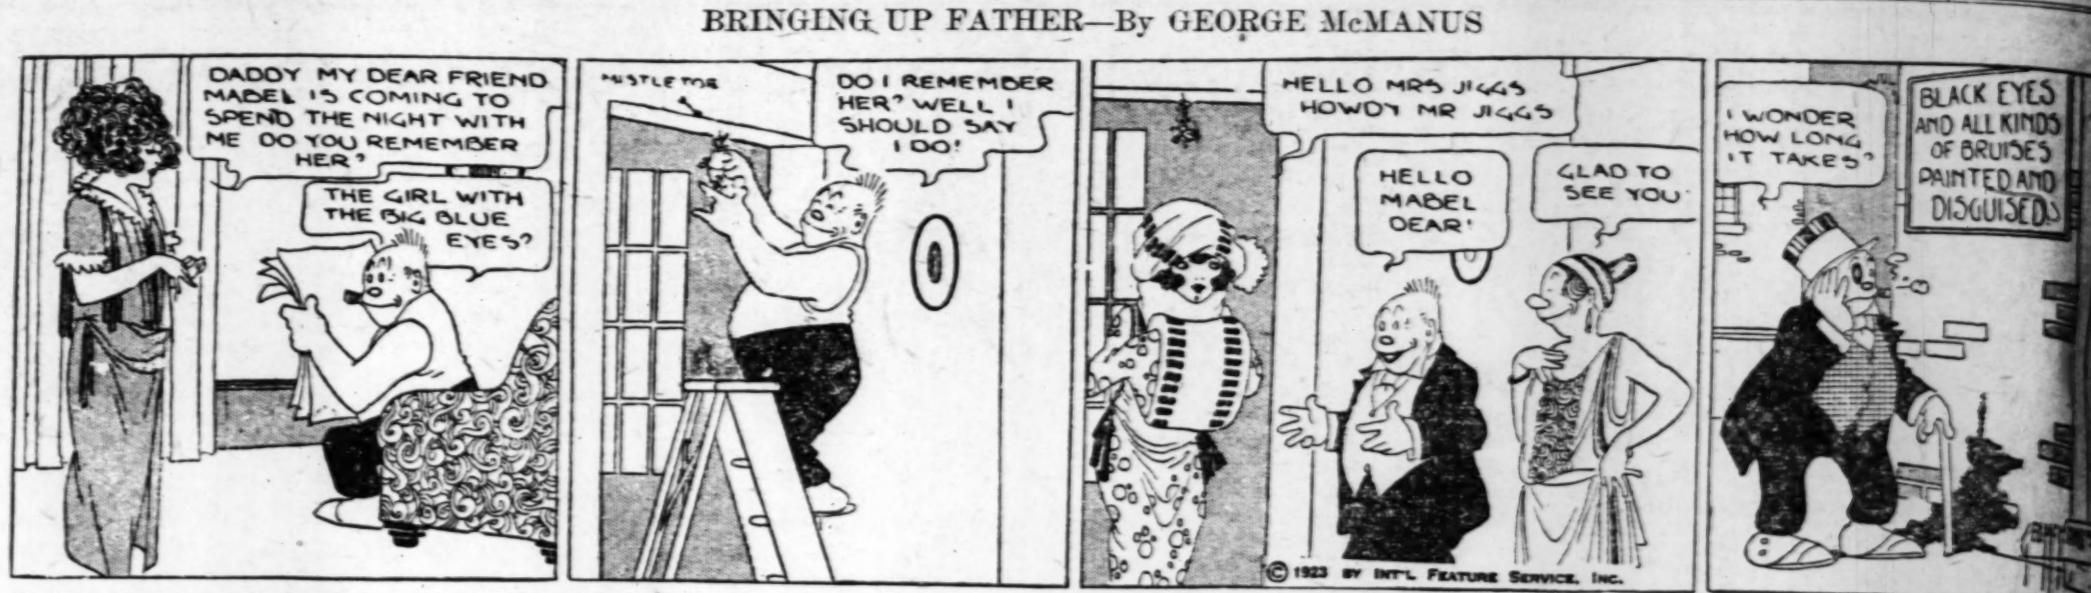

"Say," he demanded, "what's the matter with them boys upstairs? I went up to the door just like they told me to, and I rapped three times and a fellow snarled at me through a peephole and I give him the right line and he—"

"Why, you big rube!" broke in his friend. "You have gone and done it. Our lodge don't meet till tomorrow night. It's the Knights of Pythias that you tried to bust into. And you went and give 'em our sacred password!"

The abashed yokel considered the distressing situation:

"That's so," he lamented, "that's just what I done—I give 'em our password, didn't I?" Then a more cheerful thought came to him: "But, by gum, I got their counterpass!"

GATES SWING OPEN FOR 27
'POLITICAL PRISONERS'

Three Others Confined at Leavenworth Are Held for Deportation, Al though Their Sentence
Have Been Commuted
by President Coolidge.

TWO SERIOUSLY ILL WITH TUBERCULOSIS

Men Would Have Left
Prison Several Days Ago
but for Delay Caused by Red Tape and Misdirecting of Letter.

It was 4:30 p.m. when Warden W. L. Biddle reached the prison to take the commutation warrants somewhere along the line an over-worked mail clerk had placed the envelope containing the warrants in a mail bag addressed to the Warden. His blunder cost the prisoners an extra day.

The time for lockdown had passed before the warrants arrived, and most of the men had been placed in their cells for the night—regretfully, for the men had been delayed another day. This delayed the process of dressing out as the men had to be brought from their cells passed through the tailor shop and then to the chief clerk's office for their warrants, funds and personal effects.

None Looks Back.
Finally, it was announced that the train was ready and the march to the front gate began. Here there was a delay of five minutes while the men were checked to see that no other prisoner went out with them. The big gate swung open and the short walk to the interurban station began. Warden Biddle leading, for a short distance he walked with the men and then waved good-by to the group passing silently into the night. None looked back at the train of glistening lights of the prison.

On a street car that barely had all of them, they rode to the bus of Leavenworth and there separated, but included $6331 given by friends of the men, and $600 given by the Government. As the bus left the prison the men carried amounts ranging from $100 to $400.

Are Given $6331 From Friends.
Before the men left the prison they were paid in cash $6331. The sum came from friends of the men, but included $600 given by the Government. As the bus left the prison the men carried amounts ranging from $100 to $400.

Burt Lorion, Chicago; Harry Lloyd, Seattle, and J. Jacob To
San Francisco, are the three men held for deportation. Word was received at the prison that an amount of $100 was being made to provide funds for them.

The deportation warrant was Vincent Santill, out on bond, sent with the others. It will be turned to Washington. Santill is in New York City.

Two Are Tubercular.
Edward Quigley, one of the leased prisoners, is ill. Quigley is in the Warden's office with Caesar Tabib and Roy F. Conn and packing cough racked him frequently. He has spent months in the tubercular ward of Caesar Tabib and was strong beside him, but Tabib also is ill as tubercular. Both will go to Kansas City, where they expect to remain some time. Quigley is in San Francisco. Tabib came to New York as his home.

Warden Biddle suggested that a car taxicab for Quigley. "The Warden," replied Quigley, "I'll go with the rest of the bunch." James P. Thompson, who is his residence a Seattle, was convicted at Chicago, was left upon the leader of the leased prisoners. He is a Scot who is a graduate in chemistry at Du College. He complained that he had been undernourished.

"Most of the young fellows come here are robust when they come and stay only a short time.

Prison life does not tell on them.
